

Clay Coffee, Director – Procurement Americas, Chicago Bridge & Iron (CB&I)

Clay Coffee is CB&I's Director of Procurement for the Americas. In this role, he has oversight and support for all Procurement activities in developing strategic business opportunities and proposals, and also for the execution of projects for both Oil & Gas and Power within the Americas region for the Engineering & Construction business unit.

Prior to joining CB&I in 2016, Clay worked for other major Engineering, Procurement and Construction (EPC) companies and has nearly 30 years of diverse global Procurement and supply chain experience including both project execution and functional roles.

He has served as Project Procurement Manager on multi-billion dollar EPC projects in the Oil & Gas, PetroChemical, and Mining & Metals business sectors in both home office and field project assignments in the USA, Canada and Spain. Functional roles include operations responsibility and oversight for projects across multiple Business Lines, and Procurement department manager responsible for 150+ employees.

Clay has a B.S. degree in International Trade from Texas Tech University.
