

Liza Shultz, Project and Procurement Manager – Americas, ExxonMobil

Lisa is the Americas Project Procurement Manager in ExxonMobil Global Services Company. She manages a team of Project Procurement Advisors (PPAs) supporting Capital Projects within the Downstream Business Lines (EMRE, R&S, Chemical and Midstream). The PPAs are integrated into the Project teams and their primary role is oversight of equipment and material purchases, materials management and subcontracting activities.

Lisa began her career with Mobil Oil Corporation in 1989 in the Oil Movements Division in Dallas, TX. She moved through a number of financial and supervisory positions at the Chalmette Refinery in LA, before transferring into Procurement in downtown New Orleans. Lisa was assigned to the Strategic Sourcing organization in 1996 and was responsible for global strategy development of various commodities. Lisa led multiple strategy teams in Fairfax, Beaumont, Torrance CA and Singapore. At the merger in 1999, Lisa moved into the Production Sourcing organization in Houston, TX and led strategy development for the Offshore Logistics portfolio prior to Development Company project commodities and then becoming Upstream Sourcing Manager. In 2007, Lisa started her career within the Projects organization holding various contracting, procurement and Procurement Contract Manager positions (including Joint Ventures). In 2013, Lisa moved into her current role as Americas Project Procurement Manager.

Lisa played softball at McNeese St. for a few years prior to graduating from LSU with a B.S. in Accounting. Lisa lives with her family in The Woodlands, Texas and enjoys spending time with her family, sailing, boating, reading financial magazines and watching sports.
